Transformation of Education Policy

Edited by: Kerstin Martens , Alexander-Kenneth Nagel ,
Michael Windzio , Ansgar Weymann

Series: Transformations of the State

KERSTIN MARTENS is Associate Professor of International Relations at the University of Bremen, Germany. She is co-editor of New Arenas of Education Governance (Palgrave 2007)

ALEXANDER NAGEL is Assistant Professor of Sociology of Religion at the Ruhr-University of Bochum, Germany. His current research interests are institutional change in policy networks and faith-based organizations as social service providers. His recent publications examine the Bologna-Process as a policy network and apocalyptic thought in modern times.

MICHAEL WINDZIO is Associate Professor of Migration and Urban Research at the Institute for Empirical and Applied Sociology (EMPAS) Germany. His current work encompasses social networks of immigrant children in school classes, economic sociology of immigrant integration, life course research, spatial labour mobility, multilevel event-history analyses and juvenile delinquency.

ANSGAR WEYMANN is Professor of Sociology and Director of EMPAS, Germany. His areas of expertise include social theory, social change, life course research and longitudinal and international comparative studies of education and employment.

Education policy is in transformation. Internationalization processes in this field have triggered extensive public debates and compelled policy makers to restructure their national education systems. This book deals with the political consequences of the PISA Study for secondary education and the Bologna Process for tertiary education. Both are prominent political issues with substantial impact on the political debate all over Europe and beyond. However, scholars of political science and political sociology have been reluctant to give them sufficient attention. Transformation of Education Policy contains five in-depth country case studies on Germany, Switzerland, England, New Zealand and - as a contrasting case - the USA. These case studies are combined with comparative network analysis and quantitative analysis of the OECD world.
